and
The Philadelphia Society of Clinical Psychologists are pleased to offer an
SOS Workshop

Story Telling Techniques in the Psychological Assessment of Children and Adolescents

Maxine Field, Ph.D.

The stories children tell in response to pictures can provide valuable and unique information. The goals of this workshop will be to

- (a) Provide a brief review of the history of and rationale for story telling techniques and to highlight useful instruments;
- (b) Illustrate techniques for story interpretation using new data derived from youngsters' responses to the first picture of the Thematic Apperception Test (TAT); and
- (c) Use case studies to demonstrate how story material can be integrated with other test material in the psychological battery to address referral questions. This program will be of value to psychologists who perform psychoeducational evaluations and to therapists and educators who receive them.

Dr. Field, a psychologist in private practice, specializes in the assessment of children and adolescents, and does counseling with children and families. She received her Ph.D. from Bryn Mawr College.
