PSCP: The Psychology Network are pleased to offer:

MANAGING CONCUSSION RECOVERY IN THE SCHOOL ENVIRONMENT: ONE SIZE DOES NOT FIT ALL

This workshop is designed to provide current empirical information about concussion and concussion recovery in children and adolescents. The presenter will provide information about expectations for students' experiences of symptoms and potential effects on academic performance and functioning across domains, as well as psychosocial factors that complicate recovery. Time will be spent workshopping targeted strategies for supporting and accommodating students in the school environment, with discussion of challenges and pitfalls for students, teachers, and schools.

Mary Iampietro, Ph.D. is a practicing pediatric neuropsychologist at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia. She developed the clinical neuropsychology service within the Concussion Care for Kids: Minds Matter Program, and she works closely with medical providers to facilitate concussion recovery in children, adolescents, and young adults. Dr. Iampietro provides neuropsychological consultation, assessment, and psychoeducation services to patients and their families, and she provides recommendations for school accommodations that are specific to individual student needs.
